Nearly 4,500 Stranded On Cruise Ship off Mexico

Navy helicopters shuttled in supplies Tuesday to 4,500 passengers and crew members expected to remain stranded on a disabled cruise ship off the coast of Mexico at least through Wednesday night. The ship, which left from Long Beach on Sunday, was 200 miles south of San Diego when an engine room fire cut its power early Monday, according to a statement from Miami-based Carnival Cruise Lines. It began drifting off the coast of northern Baja California. (AP)

Study Links Sex, Drugs To 'Hyper-Texting' Teens

Teens who text 120 times a day or more are more likely to have had sex or used alcohol and drugs than kids who don't send as many messages, according to provocative new research. The study's authors aren't suggesting that "hyper-texting" leads to sex, drinking or drugs but say it's startling to see an apparent link. The study concludes that a significant number of teens are very susceptible to peer pressure. (AP)

Years Later, CIA Cleared

No charges for top officials who ruined interrogation videos

Washington

A special prosecutor cleared the CIA's former top clandestine officer and others Tuesday of any charges for destroying agency videotapes showing waterboarding of terror suspects, but he continued an investigation into whether the harsh questioning went beyond legal boundaries.

Zubaydah

The decision not to prosecute anyone in the videotape destruction came five years to the day after the CIA destroyed its cache of 92 videos of two al-Qaeda operatives, Abu Zubaydah and Abd al-Nashiri, being subjected to waterboarding, a form of simulated drowning. The deadline for prosecuting someone under most federal laws is five years.

The part of the nearly three-

Jose Rodriguez, who was the CIA's top clandestine officer when the tapes were destroyed, worried that the videos would be devastating to the agency if they ever surfaced and approved their destruction. year-old criminal investigation that examines whether U.S. interrogators went beyond the legal guidance given them on the rough treatment of suspects will continue, a Justice Department official said. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because that part of the probe is still under way.

In January 2008, then-President George W. Bush's last attorney general, Michael Mukasey, appointed Assistant U.S. Attorney John Durham a special prosecutor to investigate the videotape destruction. Later, President Obama's attorney general, Eric Holder, added the inquiry into the conduct of the harsh questioning.

A team of prosecutors and FBI agents led by Durham has conducted an exhaustive investigation into the matter, said Matthew Miller, chief Justice Department spokesman.

"As a result of that investigation, Mr. Durham has concluded that he will not pursue criminal charges for the destruction of the interrogation videotapes," Miller said. PETE YOST (AP)

A tip from Saudi intelligence, not cargo screening, warned the U.S. of the bombs.

Government Failed to Close Security Gaps

Washington

Despite knowing for decades that terrorists could sneak bombs onto planes, the U.S. government failed to close obvious security gaps amid pressure from shipping companies fearful tighter controls would cost too much and delay deliveries.

Intelligence officials around the world narrowly thwarted an al-Qaeda mail bomb plot last month, intercepting two explosive packages shipped from Yemen.

But it was a tip from Saudi intelligence, not cargo screening, that turned up the bombs before they could take down airplanes. Company employees in Yemen were not required to X-ray the printer cartridges the explosives were hidden inside. Instead, they looked at the printers and sent them off, U.S. officials said. (AP)

Smart says detective tried to see behind her veil but backed down

Salt Lake City

Elizabeth Smart told jurors Tuesday that a Salt Lake City police detective tried to see behind her veil but backed down when the man accused of kidnapping her said her face was hidden for religious reasons.

"I was mad at myself, that I didn't say anything," she said on her second day of testimony in the federal trial of Brian David Mitchell.

Smart, now 23, was 14 when she was taken at knifepoint in June 2002 while sleeping. Nine months later, motorists spotted her walking in a Salt Lake City suburb with Mitchell.

Mitchell, 57, faces life in prison if he is convicted of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor across state lines with the intent to engage in criminal sexual activity.

The close call happened months after her abduction. The detective had approached a robed Smart sit-

In Plain Sight

The close call with the detective was the first of many trips out for Elizabeth Smart, with Brian David Mitchell essentially hiding a white-robed Smart, whose face was hidden behind the veil. It also came within weeks of Mitchell's July 24 plan to kidnap one of Smart's cousins, Olivia Wright. The attempt was thwarted when Mitchell tried to get through a window of the home but pushed over knickknacks from the windowsill and woke the sleeping household. (AP) ting at a library table and asked whether he could look under the veil she wore across her face. Mitchell stood between Smart and the detective. "He said that it was not allowed in our religion," she said.

The detective pressed.

"He asked if he could be a part of our religion for a day, just so he could see my face, just so he could go back [to the police station] and say, 'no it wasn't Elizabeth Smart,'" she said. Mitchell stated again firmly that it would not be allowed. The detective gave up and left, Smart said. JENNIFER DOBNER (AP)

Pentagon Can't Explain 'Missile'

Defense Department doesn't know what left vapor trail in Calif.

Washington

The Pentagon said Tuesday it was trying to determine whether a missile was launched Monday off the coast of Southern California and, if so, who might have fired it. Spokesmen for the Navy, Air Force and other military organizations said they were looking into a video posted on the CBS News website that shows an object shooting across the sky and leaving a large contrail, or vapor trail, over the Pacific Ocean. The video was shot by a KCBS helicopter, the station said Tuesday. "Nobody within the Department of Defense that we've reached out to has been able to explain what this contrail is, where it came from," Pentagon spokesman Col. Dave Lapan said. Lapan said that "all indications" are that the Department of Defense was not involved within the mystery object, and that the contrail might have been created by something flown by a private company.

This video frame grab shows what could be a missile's contrail off of California.

Normally, any missile test would require notification so that mariners and pilots could be warned, but that may not have been done in this case, Lapan said.

"It does seem implausible, and that's why, at this point, the operative term is 'unexplained,'" he said. "Nobody ... within the Department of Defense ... has been able to explain what this contrail is." The North American Aerospace Defense Command issued a statement jointly with the U.S. Northern Command saying that the contrail was not the result of a foreign military launching a missile. It provided no further details. "We can confirm that there is no threat to our nation, and from all indications, this was not a launch by a foreign military," the statement said. Cholera Enters Haiti's Capital

Dire conditions turn camps into a 'flash point' for outbreak

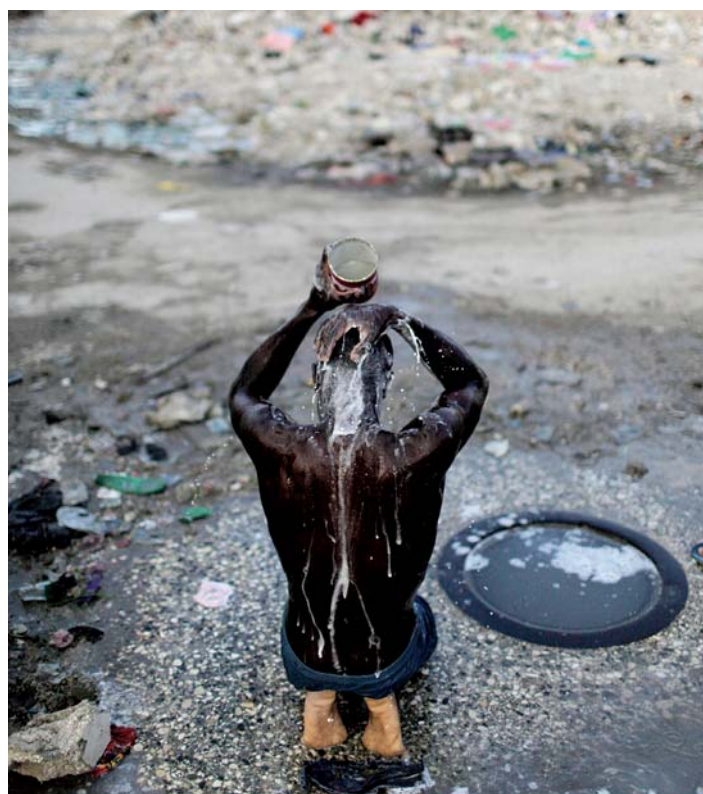

Port-au-Prince, Haiti

A cholera epidemic has spread into Haiti's capital, imperiling nearly 3 million people living in Port-au-Prince, nearly half of them in unsanitary tent camps for the homeless from the Jan. 12 earthquake.

Health authorities said on Monday that tests confirmed a 3-year-old boy from a quake refugee tent camp who hadn't been out of the city had caught the disease. More than 100 other suspected cholera cases among city residents also were being tested.

The outbreak has already killed at least 544 people in Haiti, Health Ministry Executive Director Gabriel Timothee said.

Timothee said many of the patients hospitalized in the capital with cholera are believed to have recently arrived from the Artibonite Valley, where more than 6,400

The number of confirmed cases of cholera in Haiti. Tens of thousands are thought to be infected, but only about 25 percent of people infected develop symptoms of serious diarrhea, vomiting and fever. (AP)

Cholera had never been documented in Haiti before its appearance last month.

Officials are concerned that floods triggered by Hurricane Tomas on Friday and Saturday could exacerbate the spread of the disease, which is transmitted through the consumption of fecal matter contained in contaminated water or food.

Conditions in Port-au-Prince's refugee camps have "deteriorated as a result of the storm," Boston-based Partners in Health said.

"Standing water, mud, lack of garbage collection, and limited sanitation availability make the camps a potential flash point for cholera outbreak," the group said.

Straight UK Couple Pursue Legal Union

After officials reject request, pair plan to take case to court

London

Tom Freeman and Katherine Doyle are in love and want to tie the knot — but they don't want to get married.

The 26-year-old Londoners think they should be allowed to have a civil partnership, a form of legal union available in Britain only to same-sex couples.

On Tuesday, after having their application to form a civil partnership rejected by officials at their town hall in Islington, north London, they said they will go to court to win the right. They are being backed by gay rights activists, who hope a ruling that allows straight couples the right to a civil partnership would mean, in turn, that gay couples have the right to wed.

"In our day-to-day life, we feel like civil partners — we don't feel

Backstory

In 2005, Britain introduced civil partnerships, giving gay couples the same legal protection, and adoption and inheritance rights as heterosexual married partners — but not the label of marriage. The Netherlands, Canada, Belgium, Portugal and Spain have legalized same-sex marriage, while Germany, France, Austria and Switzerland have laws similar to Britain's. (AP) like husband and wife, and we want the government to recognize that," said Doyle, a student.

Marriage and civil partnership are virtually identical in law, and activists argue both should be open to all couples.

"We think it's time there was one law for everyone," said Peter Tatchell, who is organizing the "Equal Love" campaign and has lined up eight couples — four gay, four straight — willing to take their cases to court. JILL LAWLESS (AP)

Iran Proposes a Renewal of Nuclear Talks

Country's response to EU invitation is a conditional offer

Tehran, Iran

Iran offered Tuesday to resume nuclear talks with the United States and other world powers, though it set a possible deal-breaking ground rule by insisting that a key international demand be left off the table.

The shifting signals from Tehran — which also included separate announcements with different timetables for talks — raised questions about whether Iran was seriously interested in reopening inter-

Mixed Messages

President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has endorsed the idea of nuclear talks after an invitation last month from the EU's foreign affairs and security chief, Catherine Ashton. Still, he said last week that the talks were doomed if the negotiating powers continued along a "path of arrogance." "You have only one option: That's recognizing the right and greatness of the Iranian nation," he said in a speech.

national dialogue over its nuclear program or trying to emphasize the point that it would never accept a package requiring it halt uranium enrichment.

Iran ruled out any discussion of a nuclear fuel exchange deal like the one it balked at last year and which was meant to ensure it could not divert material to nuclear weapons production.

That could force the six-nation group of negotiators — the United States, Russia, China, Britain, France and Germany — to either shun Tehran's outreach or come up with a new formula to thwart any possible Iranian attempt to make nuclear weapons.

Iran says it is pursuing enrichment technology only to make fuel for a planned network of power-generating reactors.

EU officials said that a letter from Iran suggested that it could be ready to begin talks as early as Wednesday, but it noted specific dates of either Nov. 23 or Dec. 5 in Istanbul. European diplomats, however, said the 27-nation bloc is proposing Geneva as the host site.

Still, the proposals showed Iran's apparent eagerness to reopen talks on its nuclear ambitions after facing tougher international economic sanctions. NASSER KARIMI (AP)

A Call for Mutual Respect

In a long-delayed return to Indonesia, Obama reaches out to the Muslim world

Jakarta, Indonesia

From the most Muslim nation on Earth, President Obama is reaching out to the Islamic world, declaring that efforts to build trust and peace are showing promise but are still clearly “incomplete.”

Obama on Wednesday will deliver one of the most personal and potentially consequential speeches of his presidency, reflecting on his years of upbringing in Indonesia and giving an update on America’s “new beginning” with Muslims that he promised last year in Cairo.

At the same time, the path to lasting peace in the Middle East was hardly looking smoother. A reminder of that difficult road was waiting for Obama when he landed here Tuesday on a steamy afternoon in Southeast Asia. Israel’s decision to build more apartments in east Jerusalem, a disputed territory claimed by Palestinians, had already earned a rebuke from American diplomats before a tired, traveling president weighed in himself.

“I’m concerned that we’re not seeing each side make the extra effort involved to get a breakthrough,” Obama said when questioned at a news conference alongside Indonesia’s president, Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono.

Heavily invested and eager for Mideast stability, Obama insisted: “We’re going to keep on working on it.”

Obama’s criticism came during a cherished, fleeting and twice-delayed homecoming in Indonesia. He canceled plans to come earlier this year because of domestic troubles, and now he’s dodging a big cloud of volcanic ash.

India’s most volatile volcano, Mount Merapi, has erupted with deadly force for days. The White House determined Air Force One could fly in as scheduled to Jakarta but that Obama should shorten his stay given the flow of airborne ash. That meant Obama would be in Indonesia for just 19 hours, still long enough to visit a famous mosque and deliver his speech.

The president, who is Christian, is eager to hold up Indonesia as a model: an overwhelmingly Muslim nation where other religions are respected freely and an evolving democracy is gaining strength despite a legacy of corruption.

He will revisit themes of his famous 2009 Cairo speech, one in which he called for mutual respect: from the United States for Muslims in a post-Sept. 11 world, and also from Muslims for the United States for its diversity and compassion. That speech also essentially set up an Obama scorecard on Iraq, Iran and efforts to combat Islamic extremists.

Obama is also giving substantial attention to the new partnerships his government has reached with Indonesia’s. And he is talking freely about his time here, from age 6 to 10, when he was running around as a boy named Barry.

Obama credited his out-

The increase in the U.S. favorability rating in Indonesia between 2008 and 2009, attributed to Obama’s personal ties to the nation, according to the Pew Research Center. Before Obama’s inauguration, Indonesia viewed the United States mostly as a target for protest. Hard-liners viewed the George W. Bush administration’s antiterrorism efforts as a proxy for anti-Muslim feelings. In advance of Bush’s 2006 visit to Indonesia, Muslim and nationalist groups called on Jakarta to cancel the trip. One Indonesian mystic even slit the throats of a black crow, a snake and a goat, then drank a potion of the blood; he said it would jinx Bush’s trip. (THE WASHINGTON POST) reach effort as he described the joint efforts of the United States and Indonesia, saying they were “direct results of my call in Cairo for a new beginning between the United States and Muslim communities.”

Overall, he said progress has been mixed.

“We don’t expect that we are going to completely eliminate some of the misunderstandings and mistrust that have developed ... but we do think that we’re on the right path,” he said.

Indonesians all over this country of more than 17,000 islands gathered around television sets in their houses, coffee shops and office buildings when Obama’s plane touched down Tuesday.

He was to deliver his speech Wednesday at the University of Indonesia to an indoor crowd of about 6,000 people. An outdoor event was ruled out by concern over weather and the expected overwhelming crowd. BEN FELLER (AP)

Views of Dulles at Risk

Preservation officials are concerned Metro station could harm sight lines

Virginia state historic preservation officials are concerned that a proposed outdoor location for the Metrorail station at Dulles International Airport will block sight lines of the airport's main terminal, which was designed by Finnish American architect Eero Saarinen and has been called one of the greatest architectural achievements of the 20th century.

Original plans for the rail stop at Dulles called for an underground station, but a consultant's estimate released in September put the price tag of the needed tun-

Metro says that by next summer, 22 more stations will be able to take credit card payments for parking. neling, and terminal and road improvements at $640 million more than an outdoor station.

Members of the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority, the independent body that is building the rail line to Dulles and Loudoun County, said they would consider two underground options and two outdoor locations, near the airport's north garage — about 550 feet from the terminal — and a spot on the arrivals roadway ramp in front of the terminal.

The Virginia Department of Historic Resources has said the outdoor location near the main terminal building would have "profound implications" on views of the airport.

"Saarinen's whole design concept was that people would have this sense of arrival when they drive up, and see the terrain and glimpses of the terminal," Marc Holma, a state architectural historian with the Office of Review and Compliance said Monday.

"This would seem to impede the view of this historic building." DEREK KRAVITZ (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Plea in Metro Bomb Case

Man charged in plot pleads not guilty; FBI finds radical speeches

Washington

A man charged with plotting with undercover FBI operatives to bomb four Northern Virginia Metro stations pleaded not guilty Tuesday, while searches of his home and office turned up numerous speeches by a radical Yemeni cleric linked to al-Qaeda.

Farooque Ahmed, 34, a Pakistani-born U.S. citizen and telecommunications worker from Loudoun County, was arrested Oct.

27 in an FBI sting operation, and U.S. District Judge Gerald Bruce Lee of the Eastern District of Virginia ordered him held pending a trial April 11.

Ahmed, dressed in a green prison jump suit, said little during a 15-minute arraignment on charges of attempting to provide material support to terrorists and assisting in an attack on a transit facility, namely providing scouting reports to FBI operatives he thought were agents of al-Qaeda and offering funds to terrorist groups.

The charges carry a maximum sentence of 50 years in prison.

The office of U.S. Attorney Neil

H. MacBride released lists of items recovered from a series of searches of the Ashburn townhouse where Ahmed lived with his wife, Sahar Mirza-Ahmed, and young child; his Reston cubicle for a contractor of Ericsson; his green Honda; and several bank accounts.

Agents reported seizing a double-barreled shotgun, a .22-caliber rifle and a .40-caliber Smith & Wesson pistol; dozens of rounds of ammunition; and $8,000 in cash.

Several CDs of lectures and speeches and a pamphlet by Anwar al-Aulaqi were also found among Ahmed's belongings.

D.C. schools officials say one Spingarn High School student was killed and another was wounded in a shooting Monday night.

Police say two teens were shot around 8:45 p.m. Monday in the 1300 block of Holbrook Street-NE. That's more than a mile from the school.

The teens were taken to an area hospital, where one student was pronounced dead. Officials identify the student killed as 17-year-old Joseph Sharps Jr. Police say the second teen was admitted with injuries that are not thought to be life-threatening. (AP)

The behind-the-back pass that set up the thunderous dunk? That was freshman Terrell Stoglin dishing the ball.

The dribble drive and no-look pass that set up the easy layup? That was freshman PeShon Howard with the assist.

But on the sideline, Maryland coach Gary Williams, sweating and pacing, wouldn't allow a smile. Because for every flash of potential during Maryland's season-opening victory over Seattle University on Monday — from the six newcomers or the returning vets — there was a moment of frustrating sloppiness.

"We had some unforced turnovers, which are the ones that we will need to get rid of," Williams said. "Teams are going to press you if they see that you are not very good at handling pressure, so we need to show them that we can handle it. If we had any belief that we were good at handling pressure, it got knocked out of us tonight."

mistakes is tonight when College of Charleston visits College Park, the second of three games that essentially serve as a warm-up for next week's game against No. 5 Pittsburgh.

"We can't have that," senior point guard Adrian Bowie said of Monday's giveaways. "If we do that against Pittsburgh, we're going to get killed."

The Terrapins turned the ball over 29 times against Seattle with Bowie as the leading culprit — seven turnovers in 12 minutes.

When Bowie promptly got in first-half foul trouble, Stoglin became the first reserve off the bench, followed shortly thereafter by Howard. The freshmen were assertive and productive in their collegiate debuts.

Stoglin scored 15 points with five assists and Howard scored five points with eight assists. Optimism about their performance was tempered only by the seven combined turnovers they committed.

"I thought they did great for their first college game," Williams said. "They're going to try some passes that they probably got away with in the past and you won't at this level, but they will learn. That's where you see if they are making progress if they don't go back and do the same mistake again."

It became clear on Monday that the freshman guards will play a critical part in Williams' rotation of players. But otherwise, Williams has yet to settle on how best to utilize his new players.

Typically, Williams uses an eight- or nine-man rotation. On Monday, he used 11 players in the first half and all 13 players in the second half.

"By the end of November, hopefully we'll have a good feel of what our rotation will be and guys will know what their roles will be," Williams said. DEREK TURNER

McNabb on QB Controversy: Let's Move On

The Redskins

Redskins quarterback Donovan McNabb repeated many of the same themes he touched on last week — that he wants to move on from his benching against Detroit, and that suggestions that he doesn't understand coach Mike Shanahan's offense well enough to run it in clutch situations are unfounded — during his weekly radio appearance Tuesday on ESPN980.

"That is hilarious to me," McNabb said on "The Sports Fix" with hosts Kevin Sheehan and Thom Loverro, responding to questions that he didn't know the offense well. "That is really funny to me. I think for everyone who may not have heard any of this, it's probably a shock to them.

"But we move forward for now. Everyone's going to say whatever all throughout this week, and probably during this game. I don't focus on it. Let's move on."

night's game against Philadelphia Wednesday. The McNabb issue — Shanahan sat the veteran starter with 1 minute, 50 seconds left in what became a loss to the Lions on Oct. 31 — dominated the Redskins' bye week. But McNabb, who traveled to his home in Arizona, said he did not let the issue affect his time off.

"People may have made their comments about it, but it's one that you don't want to talk about," McNabb said. "I don't think for my friends and family, it's not an issue where we're going to sit here and try to dig into it." BARRY SVRLUGA (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Report: Newton Cheated at UF

College Football

Auburn athletic director Jay Jacobs said a report that Tigers quarterback Cam Newton faced possible expulsion from Florida for academic cheating is "sad" and reiterated that Newton is eligible both academically and athletically.

"These allegations and rumors about Cam Newton are unfortunate and sad because they seem intent on tearing down the reputation of a young man who has done everything we've asked him to do," Jacobs said in a statement Tuesday. "Cam has been and continues to be completely honest with us. Cam is, by all accounts, a great kid."

Foxsports.com reported Monday that Newton was caught cheating three times and was to appear for a hearing in front of Florida's Student Committee during the spring semester of 2009.

Foxsports.com reported that Cam Newton was caught cheating thrice at Florida.

Newton transferred to Blinn Junior College in Brenham, Texas, where he played last season.

The Heisman hopeful landed at Blinn after an arrest at Florida in November 2008. Campus police said he stole a $1,700 laptop then threw it out his dormitory window when officers arrived to investigate. The charges were dropped last December when he completed a pretrial intervention program for first-time offenders.

Auburn coach Gene Chizik called the academic allegations "garbage" Tuesday. (AP)

Wizards' Big Men Push for More

Blatche, McGee say they need to shore up effort inside the key

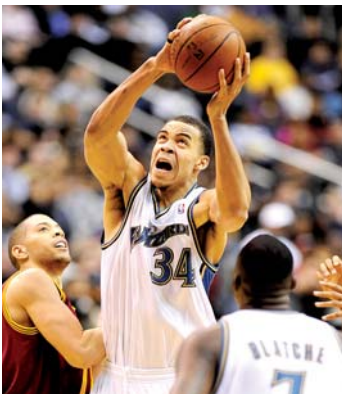

The Wizards

JaVale McGee ranks fifth in the league with 2.6 blocked shots per game. Andray Blatche is one of just 13 players in the league averaging at least 17 points and 7.5 rebounds. But McGee and Blatche know that those individual statistics aren't enough for them to declare the Wizards as a stout front line. McGee and Blatche both had their first double-doubles of the season on Saturday against Cleveland, as they combined to grab 25 rebounds — matching the Wizards' total in their season-opening loss in Orlando. Blatche revealed afterward that they were goaded by comments from a Wizards assistant coach who told them that a coach on the New York Knicks staff said the Wizards have the "worst frontcourt." Before facing the Cavaliers, Blatche brought together all of the bigs for a meeting. "We told ourselves we had to work harder, which

We still have some more work to go with it, and we'll continue to get better at it and push each other in practice and continue to try to get better." The Wizards are surrendering 46.4 points in the paint each game, with opponents converting an incredible 73.3 percent of their shots at the rim. "We have to be more physical. Just put our nose in there and take care of home," center Hilton Armstrong said. "We definitely have to step that up." MICHAEL LEE (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Bringing Spiritual and Physical Aid to Isolated People

MAF delivers food following the devastating Haiti earthquake.

Using aviation and other technologies, Mission Aviation Fellowship brings the love of Jesus and life-sustaining aid to isolated people worldwide.

When the deadly earthquake struck Haiti in January 2010, the MAF Haiti team was already in place and prepared to respond. MAF coordinated relief flights from the U.S. to Port-au-Prince, as well as flights to outlying Haitian towns, delivering food, water, medical supplies, and aid workers. MAF medical evacuation flights transported scores of critically injured to treatment facilities.

"Without MAF, our ministry here would not be possible. For the lives that have been saved, we owe MAF an eternal debt of gratitude. For those who will hear and see Jesus touching them through our medical volunteers and the efforts of MAF, our appreciation on their behalf is infinite."

“I discovered five of my children were killed on the spot.”

— Daniel Vik

On March 7, 2010, gunshots awakened Christians in Dogo Nahawa, a small village in Northern Nigeria. By morning, more than 500 Christians – men, women and children – were dead, slaughtered by roving gangs armed with machetes, guns and knives. A 4-year-old girl had her arm severed by a machete-wielding militant. Churches and homes were burned. In one night, a thriving Christian village became a place of mass graves, orphaned children and hundreds of injured people. “People came to attack me with long knives and machetes, without uttering a statement,” said Daniel Vik, a village elder. “Later, I discovered five of my children were killed on the spot.”

Even with such devastation, Christians in this area of Nigeria are rejoicing, thanks to the help provided by The Voice of the Martyrs and VOMedical. Days after the attack, VOMedical Director “Dr. Kim” was on site, examining and treating injured Christians. VOMedical helped secure medical treatment for more than 240 Nigerian Christians who were injured in three consecutive attacks. VOMedical provides needed surgeries, prosthetics, medicine, physical therapy and spiritual and health counseling to people injured because of their faith. VOM also provides support to families of Christians martyred for their faith, supplying basic necessities, vocational training, Bibles and other Christian literature, evangelical tools and much more.

Your CFC gift will provide critical aid to Christians around the world who are persecuted because of their faith. Join in fellowship with the persecuted church by donating to VOM today. For more information about persecuted Christians around the world, sign up for The Voice of the Martyrs FREE monthly newsletter at www.persecution.com or by calling (800) 747-0085.

Geek Philosophy

Right on Target

For those of you who somehow managed to miss the news, "Call of Duty: Black Ops" — the seventh installment in Activision's billion-dollar first-person shooter video game series — arrived in stores on Tuesday. If the early indicators are any sign, "Black Ops" will be the franchise's biggest hit yet.

The game makers spared no expense producing the compelling story version of the game you experience when you play in single-player mode. Big-name Hollywood actors Sam Worthington and Gary Oldman do the voiceovers? Check. Graphics so detailed that you might actually feel as if you're in Cuba, Vietnam and Russia? Check.

But we all know the real action in "Call of Duty" games is the multi-player mode, and "Black Ops" literally raises the ante there. "Black Ops" lets players acquire currency for each successful attack. These points can be used to buy better guns to get more points. You can also gamble your "COD" points against other players online, wagering that you'll finish in the top three in a competition. "Black Ops" aims high and hits the mark.

Electro-pop performer Khaela Maricich combines acoustics and visual arts in shows that are customized for each venue.

Singular Vision

The Blow's Khaela Maricich treats her listeners to dynamic artistic spectacles

Performers

As the Blow, Khaela Maricich disregards all rock conventions. No roadies hauling gear; no onstage grouching about life on the road. Instead, it's her, a mic and a bare stage, engaging the audience in a dynamic experience that's part concert, part performance art. Maricich weaves her electro-pop through with threads of extemporaneous monologues, without the safety of instruments or a backing band.

"I like the void. I like confronting it there on the stage," she says. "I could fill [the stage] up with things, but it would be a matter of finding something that was worth putting there. What would I put on the stage, a sofa?"

A Blow show is an amalgam of confession, stand-up comedy and personal catharsis. Maricich is a multifaceted artist — she also dabbles in visual art — and she says her favorite way to communicate is through live expression.

"I'm really an extrovert, and being a visual artist requires introversion, where you sit around by yourself making things and then you show them to people," she says. "If I make something, then I want to stand next to it and explain it. I think that is the cue that I'm a performer more than I'm a visual artist."

Maricich will play some new material at the Black Cat on Wednesday, though she's mum about who her new collaborators are. She's more than happy, however, to discuss her current tour — a collabora-

Musical Muse

Some of Khaela Maricich's newest material is reportedly inspired by the exploits of TMZ regular Lindsay Lohan, below. Maricich's recent performances have included songs that might have come from a collaboration between herself and Lilo for the troubled star's supposed new album, including one inspired by a conversation between Lohan and her mom about lesbian relationships, according to the New York Times. There's no word, however, on whether Lohan's rehab stint has crimped Maricich's ironic style. (EXPRESS) tion with artist Melissa Dyne.

For this string of performances, Dyne and Maricich have treated the shows like unique installations by customizing visual and sonic elements of the performance to the unique acoustics, architecture and staging of each venue.

While Maricich sings onstage, Dyne manipulates prerecorded tracks and lighting schemes.

"I'm there alone on the stage, but in the collaboration with her there's all sorts of invisible support," Maricich says. DAN MILLER

1 Scandalous
We're suspicious of anything that claims to be a dark comedy about the murder of a 6-year-old beauty queen. Child homicide doesn't lend itself to chuckles. But Woolly Mammoth has proved itself adept at commenting on our scandal-obsessed culture. So, we'll check out "HOUSE OF GOLD" — it's about a pageant winner who definitely isn't JonBenet Ramsey. 641 D St. NW; through Nov. 28; 202-393-3939, Woollymammoth.net.

2 It Never Ends
If you're not sick of election jabber by now, you could do worse than to read "GAME CHANGE," a book about the 2008 election by John Heilemann and Mark Halperin. These guys know their stuff and will have fascinating insights. We'll go, but we might take five-minute Absolutely No Politics Breaks during which we just listen to Cee Lo or something. Politics and Prose, 5015 Connecticut Ave. NW; Wed., 4 p.m., free; 202-364-1919, Politics-prose.com.

Slapstick was so much better in the silent era, when stars did their own stunts. As part of its Civil War program, the Archives is showing Buster Keaton's "THE GENERAL," in which Keaton jumps over a moving train to save the Confederate army. Yeah, the Confederate part is a little uncomfortable, but the film remains hilarious — and it'll be accompanied by a live orchestra. National Archives, 700 Pennsylvania Ave. NW; Wed., 7 p.m., free; 202-357-5000, Archives.gov.

A TV expert breaks down the battle for late-night domination

Books

Bill Carter wasn't on Team Coco, but he wasn't rooting for Jay Leno, either. The New York Times' television writer didn't take sides during this year's battle for "The Tonight Show" — and that objectivity is what makes his latest book, "The War for Late Night: When Leno Went Early and Television Went Crazy," a look at everything that happened at NBC that you didn't hear about, such a compelling read.

"I think a lot of them wanted to tell their part of the story," said Carter, who interviewed NBC executives and people in both Conan

Conan O'Brien hosts his new TBS talk show, "Conan," on Monday night.

O'Brien and Jay Leno's camps for the book. He spoke to Express about his thoughts on the relationship between the two men and how they've each moved forward.

The situation was often presented as David versus Goliath, with O'Brien as the underdog. How did you avoid that story line?

On the Conan side, there's a lot of high emotion, especially among his supporters, and resentment toward Jay. ... [But] Jay going into prime time was not a great idea, and it turned out to be a disaster for him. ... [Leno is] driven to do the thing he wants to do, and sometimes that may mean other people are displaced.

What does the future hold for late-night TV?

Certainly, it's become insanely crowded ... you have seven, eight, nine shows doing the same format, and it really becomes extremely hard to stand out. ... The future of these kinds of show are very much threatened, because they can't make the kind of money they used to make. ROXANA HADADI

One Legend You'll Attempt to Forget

Album Review

In "Man on the Moon II: Legend of Mr. Rager," Kid Cudi's sophomore album, the rapper attempts to deliver "some generation-next [expletive]." But with 17 songs about the same old stuff — models, drugs, the pressures of fame — Kid Cudi drowns in the same material Drake covered earlier this year with his debut, "Thank Me Later." And Drake did it a lot better.

The whole album is a missed opportunity, with only glimpses of the ingenuity Kid Cudi showed with last year's "Man on the Moon: The End of Day," which displayed both the rapper's pop sensibility and honest storytelling style.

"Man on the Moon II: Legend of

Mr. Rager," however, has no such redemption. Its 17 tracks, bloated with pot references and braggadocio, are rife with poorly put-together verses that are intolerable to listen to. Like its predecessor, the album is split into five parts — "The World I Am Ruling," "A Stronger Trip," "Party On," "The Transformation" and "You Live & You Learn" — all basically about smoking dope and being awesome.

The album's only highlight is its first single, "Erase Me," a stab at pop rock that's similar to what

Kid Cudi

Man on the Moon II: Legend of Mr. Rager

Lil Wayne tried to do with his "Rebirth" album. An '80s-hair-metal-inspired tale of a failed relationship that has Kid Cudi reveling in rejection ("It's like I'm her new nightmare/She ain't escaping/It makes me feel a bit complete"), the song is the only one on the album that actually ventures outside the hotbox prison Kid Cudi has created for himself. ROXANA HADADI

Diane Keaton's Very Bad Rap

Personalities

In "Morning Glory," Diane Keaton plays a veteran TV morning-show host who takes on the silliest assignments just to keep herself on the air.

In reality, Keaton is one of Hollywood's favorite actresses, an Oscar winner with more than 40 feature films to her credit. The 64-year-old actress, director and producer says her enthusiasm hasn't waned over her 40 years in film. Unlike her "Morning Glory" character, Colleen Peck — who is determined to keep her job at almost any cost — Keaton's curiosity about people makes her work feel fresh. She spoke with The Associated Press about her latest role.

How did you like working with Harrison Ford in "Morning Glory"?

He is hilarious. I love working with him — are you kidding? He's beautiful! What about that face? That face held up.

You rap with 50 Cent in this movie. How was that?

Humiliating. And you know, I do have a daughter who is 15, and that made it even more humiliating because she thought I was just such an idiot.

This was your rap debut!

That's my rap debut, and that's the end of me as a rapper. I won't be working with Kanye or Jay-Z. They have not called. I would like to. I'm available, guys.

Colleen Peck is nothing like the journalist you played in "Reds." Does "Morning Glory" have a serious message about journalism?

It's a hard job — that's what I think it has to say. Then there's the entertainment factor versus the hard news. ... When does it become selling out when it's entertainment? You know my stance as Colleen Peck: Bring on the entertainment, man! SANDY COHEN (AP)

A 'Psych' Connection

USA's detective hit retains its breezy, silly, satirical appeal

Series Return

In stark contrast to the recent failure of NBC's "Undercovers" — the second highly promoted NBC show to be canceled this season (but still airing a new episode at 8 p.m. Wednesday) — the cheap, silly, basic cable comedy "Psych" keeps churning along.

Much like "Monk," the murders on "Psych" are mostly bloodless and off-screen, and its lead character, Shawn Spence (James Roday), is not exactly the heart-throb type.

But what "Psych" has and

The crime-fighting duo of James Roday, left, and Dule Hill is back in action.

"Undercovers" lacked is an infectious sense of fun and a throw-away approach to ridiculous banter. Both the show and its faithful audience seem to exult in sending up the much grimmer, violent and hackneyed detective genre that constitute much of the network TV schedule.

Wednesday night's show, the first of a number of original "Psyche" episodes to return in USA's half-season allotments, features the return of the foppish jewel thief Despereaux (Cary Elwes) and an over-the-top parody of several well-worn plot devices, including the eventual revelation of "the real killer" and the realization that the attraction between two principle characters can no longer be denied. Snap your own photo souvenirs with a guided tour in Kauai

Adventure

The best part of the best-ever family vacation was practically an afterthought. With just days to go before my parents and I left for a week on the Hawaiian island of Kauai, an e-mail from my father pinged in my inbox. "What do you think?" he wrote, pasting in a link to Hawaiian photos.net.

A photo tour? I was sold.

My goals for the trip were simple: Spend as much time as possible in the ocean, drink anything that had rum in it, and take as many pictures of paradise as my camera's memory card would hold.

My dad found Vincent K. Tylor's photo tour by accident while he scoured the Web for photographs taken on the picturesque island, hoping to sight angles in advance and eventually re-create the shots he admired.

Tylor is a professional photographer who has called Kauai home since moving there in 1997 from suburban Washington, D.C.

Today, Kauai Photo Tours is one of two companies offering such excursions on the island. Tylor and his staff take about 1,500 people a year on tours of Kauai, considered by many to be the most visually stunning of Hawaii's islands.

Tours last about five hours with

Guided photo tours in Hawaii allow tourists to take their own pictures of paradise.

A guided photo tour of Kauai: Vincent Tylor's photography tours of Kauai, $119 plus tax per person: Hawaiianphotos.net. Private tours by arrangement. Traditional tours start at $119, and private tours start at $439. Tours last about five hours. (AP) a maximum of seven people in a group. They include up to 15 stops, and he wisely fills the back of his SUV with snacks, water, sunblock and bug spray, and makes a lunch stop during the tour.

Tylor's tour guides swap out locations depending on the weather, time of day and year, and Tylor keeps adding new stops to his rotation as he discovers them.

"They can leave a real impression on you," he said. "It's exciting to see people's faces light up when we take them out to photograph, or just see and enjoy, for themselves."

It's been nearly six months since we took the trip to Hawaii. I spent the rest of the week snorkeling, sailing on a catamaran that cruised along the Napali Coast, and wandering small towns that dot the island. And Tylor was right.

I can still close my eyes and imagine some of the scenes. Or I can just open my photo album and page through some of the hundreds of pictures that show the landscape I know I'll never forget.

The Queen of Quick

She might host the Food Network's "Barefoot Contessa," but celeb cook Ina Garten can still get stressed in the kitchen. And after a long day at work, the all-American wants to make something simple but delicious for dinner, just like you. That's why she came up with her new book, "Barefoot Contessa How Easy Is That?" ($35, Clarkson Potter), a collection of tried-and-true recipes short on complex techniques and specialty ingredients but still long on flavor. We spoke recently with Garten about why you should pick up her cookbook before picking up the phone to order pizza. BETH LUBERECKI

You always seem so relaxed in the kitchen. Have you always felt that way?

I never feel relaxed in the kitchen! I'm really not a comfortable cook; I'm not a trained professional chef. I'm just as nervous as anybody else when I'm cooking, but I love to do it. And maybe my years in the food business help. But my husband knows that in the 20 minutes before people get there, don't talk to me.

"You have to do things that make people feel really comfortable. That makes the best party."

Why was the time right for a cookbook focused on easier recipes?

Our lives just keep getting busier and busier. And I find that all the recipes I make are the easy ones that I go to all the time, whether it's for company or just getting dinner on the table.

LEMON CHICKEN BREASTS

"This is about as easy as it gets. White wine, garlic and oregano give this chicken great flavor. I make some basmati rice or couscous to soak up all those delicious lemony juices, plus a vegetable like steamed haricots verts and I'm done."

Ingredients

- ▶ 1/4 cup good olive oil
- ▶ 3 tablespoons minced garlic (9 cloves)
- ▶ 1/3 cup dry white wine
- ▶ 1 tablespoon grated lemon zest (2 lemons)
- ▶ 2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice
- ▶ 1 1/2 teaspoons dried oregano
- ▶ 1 teaspoon minced fresh thyme leaves
- ▶ Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper
- ▶ 4 boneless chicken breasts, skin on (6 to 8 ounces each)
- ▶ 1 lemon

Makes Four Servings

Preheat the oven to 400 F.

Warm the olive oil in a small saucepan over medium-low heat, add the garlic, and cook for just one minute — but don't allow the garlic to turn brown. Off the heat, add the white wine, lemon zest, lemon juice, oregano, thyme and 1 teaspoon salt, and pour into a 9-by-12-inch baking dish.

Pat the chicken breasts dry and place them skin side up over the sauce. Brush the chicken breasts with olive oil and sprinkle them liberally with salt and pepper. Cut the lemon in eight wedges and tuck it among the pieces of chicken.

Bake for 30 to 40 minutes, depending on the size of the chicken breasts, until the chicken is done and the skin is lightly browned. If the chicken isn't browned enough, put it under the broiler for two minutes. Cover the pan tightly with aluminum foil and allow to rest for 10 minutes. Sprinkle with salt and serve hot with the pan juices. INA GARTEN ner on the table. So, I thought I'd challenge myself to see if I could do something in each recipe that makes it even easier. Like risotto. It's certainly not hard to stand at the stove for 25 minutes and stir, but who wants to? So, I thought I'd see if I can do something you can just throw in the oven.

What are some of your favorite things to make when you're pressed for time?

One of the things I make a lot in the book is the lemon chicken breasts (see sidebar) with couscous and some vegetable. You really can't screw it up. You basically throw it together and put it in the oven.

You talk about the importance of a well-stocked pantry. What are some key items you always have on hand?

I always have pasta, frozen truffle butter in the freezer, and all kinds of rices and grains like couscous and brown rice. What I like to do is have enough things on hand so that on the way home all I have to do is stop and get two things, like fresh salmon and carrots. I don't have to stop at four different stores to get what I need just to make dinner.

Why is having good equipment so vital?

It's like a surgeon having the right instruments. I just think a food processor makes it easier; sharp knives make it easier to cook. I don't have a million different pieces of specialized equipment — I just like to have the basics. White plates, a stack of sheet pans, a good juicer: These are things I use over and over again.

Do people overcomplicate things when hosting a dinner party?

The biggest entertaining mistake that people make is that they feel like they have to impress people, and, in fact, it's just the opposite. You have to do things that make people feel really comfortable. That makes the best party. When it's easy for the hostess, everyone is relaxed, and I think that's the setting for a better party.

Horoscope

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Don't go to any great lengths to explain yourself, though be prepared because the time will come when you must do so.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Communication is the key to unlocking a situation that's been bringing strife into your life and the lives of those you love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The rules are in place for a reason, and if you flout them, you're going to have to pay the price — not now, necessarily, but soon to be sure.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Someone who has been hurt by what you say is not likely to recover quickly unless you are willing to take responsibility — and say you're sorry.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Offering an apology is meaningless unless it is sincere; don't say it if you don't mean it. Another relationship needs attention, too.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may be most afraid of something that is actually quite benign — while at the same time you are courting a real problem somewhere else.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An uncomfortable situation is likely to result when you go against your instincts and do or say something out of the ordinary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A key issue is likely to become even more important as a result of developments that occurred after hours.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may hear something through the grapevine that doesn't warrant your attention at first but that stays with you for a while.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Now is not the time to stray from routine. It's important for you to do what comes naturally, but you must follow certain rules and regulations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Reputation is the key; anything you can do to bolster someone else's while you preserve your own is worth doing at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may have to throw someone else under the bus in order to protect yourself from a coming threat. It won't be easy.
